

REGULATED BUSINESSES

WE'VE BEEN ON BOTH SIDES OF THE TABLE - LET US HELP.

Is your business operation subject to regulation by state, local, and/or the federal government? Whether we like it or not, the government will keep regulating. Most of the time, regulatory changes happen slowly but they can also catch you by surprise. It is very important that your business engage in the process to help regulators understand what you do so they craft reasonable policies. Moreover, sometimes regulators interpret existing regulations in new ways that can have major impacts on your operations. If you are a respondent to regulatory action or seeking to influence regulatory policy in a more long term way, we can help.

REGULATORY REPRESENTATION

We have the knowledge and expertise to help your company navigate through enforcement issues with regulators. It is common for a respondent and a regulator to speak different languages and have trouble seeing eye to eye. We speak both languages because we've been there. More often than not, issues can be remedied in a mutually agreeable way.

LEGISLATIVE REPRESENTATION

While it is preferable to work things out with agencies, sometimes the law fails to provide the flexibility needed to employ common sense solutions. Moreover, some in the legislature may be seeking to enact measures that would be harmful to your operation. If you need to change the law or a good defense to help your business thrive, we can help.

POLICY RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT

If you are in business, you are probably being regulated by rules that were created decades ago. Government's slow pace in this area can be both a blessing and curse. If you want to present and push regulatory or legislative reform that will benefit your business, we're the firm for you.

D. CHANCE MCNEELY

Founder and Principal

C: 318-518-5367

chance@premierpolicies.com

